11 JURORS IN HICKMAN TRIAL ARE SELECTED

By JEROME STRAUSS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 26.—Tomorrow may see a jury completed to try William Edward Hickman for the kidnapping and killing of little Marion Parker but the prospects are not bright. It is more likely that a good part of Monday will be gone through before the jury box will be filled. Seven men and four women sat in the box when court adjourned this afternoon because of an exhausted panel. The twelfth man had just been excused because of objections to capital punishment. Each side has peremptory challenge. Thus far only one has been used and that by the district attorney's office.

Jerome Walsh, chief defense attorney, this afternoon questioned prospective jurors with special reference to their courage. "Would you put aside all thought of your personal safety to stand by your conviction if you thought this defendant guilty, was the gist of his questioning along this line. Because of the state of public feeling since the kidnapping and killing of the Parker girl, the defense it is known is particularly anxious concerning the fibre of the jury.

Every member of the panel so questioned declared the element of personal safety would be allowed to play no part in coming to a decision.

JURORS MIDDLE-AGED
Most of the members of the panel questioned today were elderly or in middle life.

The eleven persons in the jury box when court closed today all have been taxed for cause. It will take peremptory challenges to remove any of these.

Nearly a dozen persons were excused for causes today. The reasons included objections to capital punishment and fixed opinions on the case. One man was excused when he wept saying he believed Hickman to be sane and guilty but trembled at the responsibility of voting for his death.

HICKMAN MOTIONLESS

While the examination of talesmen droned along, the defendant sat for the most part motionless in his chair except to cast an

JUDGE DENIES NEW TRIAL IN DAMAGE SUIT

MARTINEZ, Jan. 26.—Judge H. Alvarado this afternoon denied the motion for a new trial in the Hunt vs. Walker-Sedlitz damage suit holding that he believed the explanatory affidavits filed by six of the twelve jurors were sufficient explanation of how the $1500 judgment was reached.

James E. Hoey, counsel for the defendants, announced this afternoon following the denial of the new trial motion that steps will be taken immediately to perfect an appeal.

Retracting their original affidavits which asserted that the $1500 judgment given Mrs. Frances Hunt, of Richmond, in damages from James Walker and Joseph Sedlitz was determined upon by means of a lottery, six of the twelve jurors who returned the above verdict in Mrs. Hunt's suit for $20,000 damages, this morning filed explanatory affidavits when attorneys for Walker and Sedlitz sought to obtain a new trial in Judge H. V. Alvarado's court.

Two of the six jurors who filed second affidavits, Mrs. Edna Barnes and Ben Zolfo of Pittsburg, took the witness stand to explain the circumstances under which they signed the original affidavits which declared in effect that the jurors decided in advance that the average sum obtained by adding the amounts set forth by the twelve jurors and dividing by twelve should be the judgment sum. All six of the jurors swore in their second affidavit filed with the court by attorneys for Mrs. Hunt that they did not fully understand the import of the original affidavit and that instead of agreeing before hand that the total thus reached should be the verdict, the jurors had agreed among themselves to adopt that plan to reach some figure which might serve as a "common ground" for further discussion.

Both Mrs. Barnes and Zolfo told the court that the jurors first took a ballot on whether

Builders Exchange Holds "Oriental Night" Meeting

One of the most novel and successful social meetings of the Contra Costa County Builders Exchange took place last night when "Oriental Night" was attended by 100 members in the Exchange banquet room.

The walls were covered in Chinese hangings and with flower bowls and incense on the tables, and subdued lights covered by Chinese lanterns gave the atmosphere of the Orient.

A four-course Chinese dinner was served by Edmund Wong, proprietor of the new Palace Tea Garden cafe. Chinese musicians played on their native instruments and girls in costume served the various dishes.

Toastmaster E. B. Bull introduced a "distinguished visitor from the Orient" who in Chinese robes added to the local color. He addressed the members in Chinese and English and later held a conversation with Wong in what appeared to be their native tongue.

It was Al Paulsen, councilman and realtor.

When the entire was served, the members found that they were without forks. The Chinese maidens brought chop sticks and those members who did not learn to eat with them were immediately fined, the proceeds going to ward a steam table to be installed in the kitchen of the exchange.

Following the dinner, the evening was turned over to E. H. Higgins, president of the Exchange, who reported on the recent Fresno convention of the State Builders. P. M. Sanford, former president of the Richmond Exchange and now state president

FIVE PETITIONS CIRCULATED TO AID PHYSICIAN

Pending the time before which sentence of Dr. E. R. Camp is to be pronounced, a remarkable development has taken place in connection with the case, and it is generally agreed, it is a remarkable move in view of the nature of the charge to which the aged physician has entered a plea of guilty.

A wave of sympathy has swept the San Pablo section, where the doctor has labored for the past forty years, and petitions, addressed to the superior court, are being circulated in San Pablo, Mantoloking, Redwood and El Cerrito, and will be presented, asking that clemency be shown.

From reports received at this office late last night, it is believed the petitions will have the signatures of over 1,000 persons, who have known the defendant for years.

In the petitions, the work of the physician for the past half century is outlined, and it is suggested that in view of the age of the doctor, the accused is not responsible for his actions, and is more in need of medical care than attention.

Three different petitions are being circulated, and although each one is couched in different language, the general tenor of all is the same.

FIRST PETITION

The first petition circulated has the following heading: San Pablo, Calif., Jan. 26, 1928. TO THE HONORABLE A. B. MCKENZIE, JUDGE OF THE SUPERIOR COURT, CONTRA COSTA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

WE, the undersigned residents, freeholders, taxpayers and citizens of the Tenth Township and vicinity, herein petition your honor in behalf of DR. E. R. CAMP, whose case is before your court.

We respectfully submit, that Dr. Camp has been for forty years a successful practicing physician in San Pablo, and that hundreds of people have been blessed with his services in times of need and through his bountiful acts of charity. The poor and distressed have received his medical aid without charge and there are hundreds of our people living today who would be slumbering beneath the sod had he not been among us. From his liberal hand the poor families have received money for rent, for clothing and for food, and to the boys and girls he has been a living Santa Claus. He is a poor man today because of his high-heartedness and charitable nature.

From his mother, Dr. Camp inherited secrets of Indian medicines and remedies, which have been a boon to all our people, and which have been the reason for his unparalleled success in his profession. An outstanding and yet marvelous record in this regard is the fact that during the terrible years of the epidemic, when he administered to hundreds of people, but ONE of his patients passed away, while in other communities the percentage of deaths rose to 40 and 50 per cent. From San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and San Jose, patients have journeyed to (Continued on Page Eight)

ADVERTISING BOOSTS

Evidence continues to pile up to the effect that the great advertisers of the country are coming more and more to recognize the fact that the newspaper is the best medium for advertising their wares.

John B. Spilker, president of the Cincinnati Real Estate Board recently told the Advertisers club of that city, that the newspaper was undoubtedly the best medium for advertising real estate. Mr. Spilker told members of the club that it certainly pays to advertise real estate and that both classified and display space in newspapers are valuable for this purpose. Among other things the speaker emphasized the following points:

Don't confine all of your advertisement to the classified ads. Try display advertising.

"Your ads should have a sentimental appeal instead of the old stereotype appeals of 'Cheaper to own your own home than pay rent.' 'Bargain price.' Argument that you can sell your home at a profit any time you want is profitable.

"Your advertising should be drawn so as to get prospects. That is the province of advertising. An ad will not sell a house.

"Advertise continuously, and don't take for granted that the public is sold on the idea of home ownership."

J. C. McQuiston, advertising manager of the Westinghouse Electric in a recent address in Chicago reiterated the fact that the local newspaper is the best advertising medium. Some of the reasons he gave, from his company's viewpoint, according to the Associated Press were:

First intimacy—enabling the company to give itself a local identity helpful to salesmen.

Second flexibility. "We can emphasize our products for a given industry in those sections where such industry predominates," he said.

Third, co-operative tie-in advertising with local dealers.

Fourth, reader interest—nearly every worthwhile American buys and reads his daily paper. The fifth advantage he listed as instant action—today's shopping news is responsible for today's selling.

Six, telling the public the industry's story; the opportunity to reach the masses with messages of local import and at timely seasons.

Seven, the advantages of localizing and nationalizing advertising.

We are wondering, if the present trend in women's styles keeps up, whether the dressmaker won't have to give way to the fellow who does fancy frescoing.

At last some genius has solved the farm problem. The farmers would be prosperous if city women would stop dieting.

Possibly the real trouble with business lately is an oversupply of business prophets.

Column Advises Girl On Care Of Motherless Babe

DEAR MME. HALL-DEANE:

Only a week ago my brother's wife died, leaving an infant son less than 2 days old. He has asked me to give up my work and come to his home and keep house and care for the little new-comer which I have agreed to do. I am only 19 and know very little about babies. I have never even bathed or dressed a baby, and I haven't even the slightest idea about how to care of his clothes—the washing, and so on. Will you advise me?

Then I would like your advice about fixing up a sleeping basket for him. He is well fixed for clothes, but he has no bed. I am fixing up a basket for him. What bedding will I need?—DORIS D.

I'm glad, Doris, to have an opportunity to help you. Please write me when other problems arise.

Although you do not say so in your letter I take it for granted that the little fellow is still in the care of a nurse, who will no doubt be able to give you some good, sound, practical advice on the care of your little foster son.

A reliable book on the care of babies will also be of inestimable value to you. I would suggest, Mr. Macfadden's book on this subject.

For the first few days of his life baby gets only a sponge bath but no doubt he will have outgrown this form of bath by the time you are ready to start "mothering" him. After he is about two weeks old he may be bathed in his tub. You can either put him in the tub first, supporting his back and head with your left hand while you soap and wash him with the right, or you can lay him on a blanket spread on a low table or bed, soap his little body, and then put him in the tub to be rinsed off. Be sure that his little back and head have proper support during the process. Washing his eyes ears and nose and mouth are best left till the very last thing, for baby usually objects to this, and if they are done first he may make his entire bath program a misery. Be careful that his bath water is not warmer than 95 to 98 degrees. Don't guess when bath thermometers are so cheap.

In washing baby's clothes be sure that they are rinsed free of soap. His napkins should be absolutely clean—never dried and used a second time, as is the habit of some mothers. The napkins should be washed in hot soap suds, then boiled for twenty minutes, after which they must be given a thorough rinsing. Soap remaining in the napkin is likely to cause an irritation of baby's sensitive skin. No soda, starch or bluing should ever be used in laundering baby's dapers. Rubber dapers or pants should not be worn constantly.

Edith—And so you've promised to be his for life.

Maude—What an old-fashioned way of putting it. Certainly not! I'm only going to marry the man

There are so many women in business today that men must associate with them on terms of business intimacy.

Is it right because a man entertains a woman at dinner to talk over business affairs as he would with another man, that it should break up his home? Aren't women entitled to be treated as human beings without considerations of sex constantly intruding? It is no uncommon occurrence to find a woman in a business organization whose judgment is considered sometimes superior to that of the men under whom she works. Innumerable women are consulted and are so thoroughly conversant with all of a man's business that they are the greatest of assets.

Men have always found that big questions of policy great matters of business, can be settled over the dinner table in the most satisfactory way. Why should a woman and a man be denied the privilege of a quiet meal together merely because of the intrusion of sex?

To the man and to the woman sex doesn't enter the scheme of things at all. They are interested in their work. They are endeavoring to put something over in a business way and their relationship is a product of women's advent into the business world.

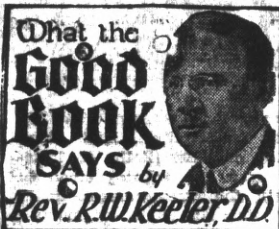

How should the man's wife feel about it? How should the woman's office associates regard it? It would seem to me that attitude is all a matter of education.

tion and that the sooner society accepts women on their face value of intelligence and understanding, unmodified of sex, only then can a woman feel that she is unhampered in her business relations with men.

Dear Patricia Lee:

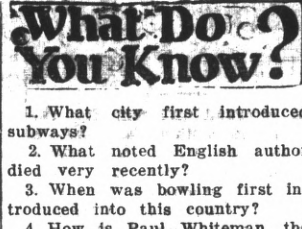

What would you advise me to do? I have been married eighteen years, and have four children. I have always had the interests of my husband and my home at heart and have helped in every way. Now my husband has taken to running around with another woman and he spends the money that he should spend on me on her and uses the car that I feel I helped to buy in giving her a good time. Should I expose them and let people know what they are or what shall I do?—G. F.

What good will it do to "expose" them as you call it? Why not try first to win back your husband by the ways that only a wife realizes are in her power? Forget if you can the unfaithfulness of your husband and try to make him see that you are quite as gay a companion as any other woman and really much more interested in his welfare than she could ever be. There are many ways that you can attempt, but don't be discouraged and remember that a little money spent on clothes and good times for yourself will help a lot.

SYNOPSIS

Mrs. Huntley Sheldon, in an attempt to divorce her husband, searches his apartment for a co-responder. She finds no one there but her lawyer, Leonard Gilbert, who, although he had been discussing alimony with Sheldon, protects them both by stating that he had been trying to gather evidence. Unknown to Gilbert, his secretary and fiancée, Myra Martin, had been there, and also her sister, Helene, because each believed the other to be infatuated with Sheldon. In hiding, the sisters meet and escape, but Helene forgets her handbag. They return to the apartment, to Sheldon's astonishment, with Gilbert's brief case. Myra's explanation, searches for Helene's bag.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued

"Well, you see, I parked the car down the street and Helene and I walked over here, and when we got in front of the door I noticed your car," Myra told Gilbert. "And I noticed that you had left the case lying on the seat. Myra soothed her conscience for the lie by saying it with the thought that it was all for the good of her sister. As a matter of fact she knew quite well that Gilbert always kept his brief case in a side pocket of the car, and she had taken it out to use it for her own purpose and advantage.

"That's funny," Gilbert exclaimed. "I never leave that bag on the seat. I usually put it in the pocket."

"Well, it was on the seat this time," Myra answered. "I suppose you were in a hurry, and forgot it. There, she had found the bag. Her own bag she had left in her car, so with a perfectly natural gesture she picked up what was obviously her bag and gloves and tucked them under her arm. "I thought I'd better bring it along," she smiled.

Botts was staring at her—she felt his eyes on her, and turned quickly. Botts, though knowing that he had seen something not quite natural, was still so confused and chagrined that he decided that he had just seen nothing new. Still he couldn't help feeling that there was something unusual about the whole thing. But with Myra returning his stare he was forced to look away.

Myra looked around at the others. None of them seemed to have noticed anything at all.

"Well," Gilbert returned to his professional manner and looked at Mrs. Sheldon. "Do you want to come back to my office this afternoon to see me about anything? And of course, Sheldon, if you want to start any kind of a suit—"

"O, I'm sure he doesn't," Mrs. Sheldon cooed.

Sheldon looked at his wife. He knew what was going to happen now. But he drew himself up and turned on his lawyer. "I've already told you what I intend doing."

"Now, Huntley, dear, you know you didn't mean it," Mrs. Sheldon went over to her husband and took his arm. "You know, after all that's happened this afternoon, I really don't think I want to divorce Huntley." She gazed appealingly at Sheldon, who was beginning to smile. Encouraged by his attitude she continued. "I've just begun to realize that it's his delightful uncertainty that keeps us so young and interested. Don't you think so, dear?" She smiled at her husband.

"Perhaps," he smiled back. "Well, we'd better get out of this. It's going to be a family reunion. You don't need a lawyer for that," Gilbert laughed. "Shall we wait friends, Sheldon?" He held out his hand.

"Surest thing you know," Sheldon agreed heartily, and took the lawyer's hand. "It's all right. I guess we'll call the whole thing off."

"And you, my dear," Mrs. Sheldon turned to Myra who was staring for the door. "I want you to come and see me some time, won't you?"

Perhaps Mr. Gilbert would bring you to dinner—you and your sister and her husband.

"Thank you, Mrs. Sheldon. That's very kind of you," Myra shook hands with Nita.

"Perhaps after I get to know you better I'll be able to think who it is you remind me of."

"Of course—and if I ever need a divorce, you'll see me in the office. Good bye."

"Good bye," Helene and Myra turned into the hallway and fled, with Gilbert following after them.

Back in the living room of the apartment Botts was staring uncertainly at his client and her husband. "Say," he frowned, "you can't make a fool out of me—I saw what—"

"Botts, I think your services are no longer necessary," Mrs. Sheldon informed him coldly.

"All right. Just as you say. Good bye." He went out, slamming the door behind him.

CHAPTER XVIII

That evening in Myra's apartment, Helene and her sister sat talking over the events of the past few days. Their relief was so great that they had decided there was nothing to do but celebrate. And so they had persuaded Ralph and Gilbert, without telling them, exactly why, to help in the ceremony.

Their evening gown sparkled and gleamed in the soft lights. In Helene's room they could hear Ralph moving about, dressing.

"Well, for goodness sake, Myra, will you please explain to me why or how you ever got mixed up with Sheldon," Helene was demanding. "After the way you warned me, I haven't got head nor tail of the story yet. You're simply got to tell me, or I'll worm it out of you somehow—I'll threaten to tell Gilbert about your going on," she laughed.

"To be frank, Helene, I wasn't going to tell you the story at all, because I didn't want to worry you," Myra began. "But after what happened this afternoon I suppose we might as well share the guilty secret. But I can't understand why you want to Sheldon's apartment."

"To protect you."

"To protect me—O, Helene, that is funny. It seems we were both playing the same hand and didn't know it. I want to protect you."

"O, Myra, please tell me your story and then I'll tell you mine. What happened after you looked me in Saturday night?"

"Well," Myra began, "you see it was a long way. I didn't exactly know what to do with you—"

"I was a bad child, wasn't I?" Helene shook her head sorrowfully. "I'm so sorry."

"It's all right, Helene. It's all over now. Anyway, I thought that if I could keep you in the house that one evening I might save you for just that night. But I guessed that as soon as you did get out—and I knew I couldn't keep you locked up forever—you'd be more anxious to see Sheldon than ever before."

"And so I should have, Myra," Helene nodded approval.

"So I thought my one chance to save you would be to see Sheldon, and tell him that he, himself, must be the one to give you up. I didn't want to go to him as your sister—I didn't think that would do much good, so I tried to disguise myself with old clothes and glasses and I took the car and off I went to Sheldon's lodge. You should have seen his face when I walked in the door, and announced myself as a representative of the Young Girls Welfare League."

"O, it must have been funny. And I couldn't imagine where you had gone when I got out and found that you had vanished. I was simply furious. But go on."

"Well, it seems that after talking to me for a while—O, yes, I tried to make Sheldon write you a note telling you that he never wanted to see you again, or something silly like that—he recognized me. But I didn't know that he knew. Then he pretended to have a heart attack, and I was so worried I went flying telling him medicines and all sorts of things, and he pretended to go off in a delirium—and I couldn't get any help, and every time I moved he tried to grab me, and I had to stay there all night. I want to sleep in a big chair."

"O, Myra, how awful. I should have been scared to death."

"Well, I was, too, but I didn't know what else to do. And I didn't know what else to do. And when I woke up in the morning there was that Japanese servant bringing in breakfast for two, and Sheldon was just spinning around in the pool. Sheldon wasn't saying any party there that night. He had dismissed all the servants and was waiting for you alone."

"JESSE JAMES" FEATURE FILM AT CALIFORNIA

Fifteen men who were associated with Jesse James and Frank James as soldiers during the Civil War and for a number of years after its close are now living in various parts of the United States. One of them is an inmate of a Confederate Home, several are wealthy retired cattlemen and others are substantial citizens of their respective communities.

Fred Thomson, who produced "Jesse James" as his first Paramount picture, has the names and addresses of all of them. They were supplied to him by Jesse E. James Jr., son of the famous outlaw, who is now a practicing attorney in Los Angeles.

Some of these men supplied data for use in the picture and others furnished guns, saddles and firearms.

A few of these men are very feeble from age, but others took a vigorous interest in the progress of the production, as they were anxious to have Jesse James presented in his true light—as a modern Robin Hood, who had thousands of friends in a dozen or more states. He was declared an outlaw during war time and was never allowed to return to his home in peace. Frank, after Jesse had been shot to death, surrendered in person to the Governor of Missouri, and in later life was invited to the White House by President Roosevelt.

The picture will be shown at the California Theatre starting today. Montague Love, Mary Carr, and Nora Lane head the supporting cast. Lloyd Ingraham directed "Jesse James." A. L. Werker supervised.

Other screen features include "Cool Off," a Christie comedy; "Bubbles of Geography" and current news events.

Miss Mona Jewell was chairman of the committee responsible for the dainty repast, Miss Sidie Cushing was in charge of the attractively decorated tables, and Miss Gladys Caylor was toast mistress of the evening. Miss Verna Kemp and Gladys Kaylor were in charge of the music and the social time which followed the banquet.

STRICKEN SUDDENLY

Almost daily we hear of it—the story of some man, probably a friend, suddenly cut off in the midst of his usefulness, in the very prime of life. That's what high blood pressure and heart trouble will do—snap off life without warning. All due to our abnormal living habits which put too great a strain upon the vital organs, especially the liver.

The liver becoming weak and sluggish fails to cleanse the blood of the poisons formed in food waste. The whole system then becomes toxic, with stomach, kidneys, heart and blood vessels affected.

The liver, especially in middle life, needs a little help, and there's nothing better for this, as physicians today know, than a little ox gall. Ox gall is a great natural stimulant for the human liver, promoting its normal active functioning, so essential to health and vitality. Dioxol tablets are genuine ox gall in dainty and tasteless form, each tablet representing ten drops of pure ox gall. They cost less than 2c each at good druggists, and one or two days' use will prove a revelation. To be sure of getting the genuine ox gall, ask for Dioxol.

Not once in the courtroom has a word been heard to pass between Hickman and any of the three defense attorneys.

On the right of the prisoner sits a guard, also motionless and silent.

BROTHER PRESENT

Alfred Hickman, brother of the prisoner, is usually in the courtroom but out of taking range. Neither parent of Hickman thus far has appeared at the trial. It is probable they will make their only appearance when called a witnesses.

Members of the Parker girl's family also have been absent. Perry M. Parker, the father is expected to appear only to testify how he gave $1,500 to the kidnaper receiving in return parts of his child, mutilated body.

Cantillon, associate defense counsel, today had objected to District Attorney Keyes statement that the defendant by his plea of not guilty of insanity had admitted the commission of the crime charged in the indictment.

"I objected to the use of the word, 'murder' in connection with a person whom we hold is insane," Cantillon said. "The word 'killing' would have been unobjectionable."

Backaches Were Slowly Killing Me

"I was almost laid out with the terrible pains and stitches in my back. I had just about given up hope of getting relief when a neighbor gave me a bottle of St. Jacob's Oil to rub on my back. I got immediate relief and have enjoyed perfect comfort since."

It's a pity that everyone with Backache, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Stiff Neck, Sprain or Blistering the skin, it penetrates to the affected part and draws out the pain like magic. If you want to know what relief is, go to your druggist and get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacob's Oil" and apply it to any aching spot.

FIVE PETITIONS CIRCULATED TO AID PHYSICIAN

receive his medical service. We believe in Dr. Camp, and his presence here is far more of a benefit than a menace, as his record here during these forty years will outbalance for GOOD against evil, on the scales of justice.

We further believe, that the underlying motive prompting the prosecution of this case to be such, if known, could not be recognized in any Court of Justice, and it is our SINCERE REQUEST that a thorough investigation be made by disinterested persons and a report given to the court, before final judgment is taken by the court, as the whole affair savors strongly of a FRAME-UP, outlined and engineered by jealousy, animosity or revenge, to railroad Dr. Camp to prison.

We further believe, that in view of his condition, since the trying times of the flu disease when Dr. Camp would go day and night without sleep, and at which time it is known he received six hours sleep in four days and nights, and when he apparently was forced to the use of opiates and other medicines to produce sleep, and for his breaking nervous system, it is our belief that the use of these medicines may have had a bearing upon any act of his or irregularity of conduct which he has admitted, and that he is more in need of medical care and attention under proper surroundings.

We would deplore the thought of a prison sentence as his reward in his declining years, for so useful and charitable a life as he has lived in San Pablo.

SECOND PETITION

The second petition reads as follows: San Pablo, Calif., Jan. 26, 1928. To The Honorable A. B. McKenzie, Judge of Superior Court, Martinez, California.

We, the undersigned freeholders, citizens and voters of San Pablo and vicinity, petition your Honor on behalf of Dr. C. E. Camp, whose case is presently in your court. That in view of his extreme age, and of the good work which he has done among the poor in our midst, and of the regard and respect in which we hold him, that it may please you to temper justice in his case, with tender mercy, and that the sentence which you may render be the lightest in your power to give, so that time may not be long until he returns to us to work out his salvation among those with whom he has lived so many years, and who have learned to love him by and through the channels of his generally good living and Christian character.

THIRD PETITION

The third petition contains the following appeal: Pinole, Calif., Jan. 26, 1928. To The Honorable A. B. McKenzie, Judge of the Superior Court, Contra Costa County, California. We, the undersigned residents of Pinole and vicinity respectfully petition your Honor in behalf of Dr. C. E. Camp, who is to come before you. We know no evil of him, but can testify to his good and charitable deeds without number in this and nearby communities.

The poor and distressed humanity have been served by him with medical aid without charge, and the hundreds of charitable donations to those in need of assistance has kept many a wolf from their doors. Hungry and ragged children have been clothed and fed by him year in and year out, and we believe his good deeds are worthy of recognition and consideration during his time of affliction, for his enviable record as a physician, shines with brighter luster than all the rest of the stars in the Medical Firmament.

We question the wisdom and as yet unknown motive beneath the surface in this case, and we believe the aged physician is in need of proper medical aid and attention, and beseech your Honor, in your good judgment, to meet the situation with a full knowledge of the credits due the defendant in his long and useful practice.

SENATE ASKS RECOUNTING IN VARE ELECTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Driven by the threatening lash of a Democratic-Progressive coalition, the senate elections committee today executed a right-about-face and ordered an immediate recount in the Vare-Wilson senatorial contest in Pennsylvania.

On a strict party vote of 5 to 3 yesterday, the committee denied the plea of William B. Wilson, Democratic opponent of Senator-elect W. S. Vare, for a recount of the ballots in the six large counties in the Keystone State.

Angered by that action, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, carried out his threat to take the matter to the floor of the senate. He presented a resolution directing the committee to proceed forthwith to the evidence in the contest and to report to the senate with all reasonable dispatch.

Republican leaders suffered a change of heart over night and before Reed presented his resolution, Senator Shortridge of California, announced that a meeting of the elections committee had been called for 3 o'clock to reconsider the action of yesterday. In offering the resolution, Reed said that in all probability it would be unnecessary to press it, but expressed confidence that he would be able to muster a majority in favor of it in the event the committee again refused Wilson's plea.

Shortridge announced after the meeting that the committee had voted unanimously for an immediate recount of the ballots cast in six counties—Philadelphia, Allegheny, Delaware, Lackawanna, Luzerne and Schuylkill—in the senatorial election of 1924. He will appoint a sub-committee of five, three Republicans and two Democrats, tomorrow and the recount will be begun as soon as a force can be organized.

Turtle. The alternates and Miss Caroline Rogers, Mrs. J. J. Fenix, Mrs. T. J. Mickey, Mrs. H. I. Oberholzer and Mrs. Charles Hunt. Delegates from all parishes and missions will be in attendance. The annual dinner will be held Monday evening, January 29, at 6 o'clock at the Commercial club, Merchants Exchange building, 465 California street. The most inspiring part of the whole program is a missionary mass meeting Wednesday night, with the combined choirs of the whole diocese and fine addresses by prominent speakers.

BAPTIST SOCIETIES MEET TODAY

JONES BILL TO CARRY BY VOTE OF 51 TO 25

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—A test vote in the senate today forecast passage of the Jones bill for an adequate American Merchant Marine. By the vote of 51 to 25, the senate approved an amendment by Senator Willis of Ohio, requiring the votes of five members of the board necessary for such sales. But as the Willis proposal was a substitute for an amendment by Senator Edge of New Jersey, providing for a majority vote, it was knocked out when the Edge amendment was defeated 54 to 23.

Party lines were broken on the vote on the Jones amendment. Four Democrats—Bleese, South Carolina, Bratton, New Mexico, Copeland, New York, and King of Utah, joined with 21 Republicans of the old guard type in opposition. Fifteen Republicans, Shipstead, Farmer-Labor and 35 Democrats joined to force its adoption.

Senator Jones of Washington,

ARCHBISHOP TOST. PAUL'S TO DEDICATE SAN DELAY BUILDING PABLO SCHOOL NEW EDIFICE

Dedication ceremonies with Rt. Rev. Edward J. Hanna, archbishop of San Francisco, as the principle speaker, will be held on Tuesday morning 31, at the new Salesian House of Study in San Pablo which is a school for young men preparing to enter this order of the Catholic church.

A solemn high mass after the address by Archbishop Hanna, will be conducted by Rev. O. Trinchieri, S.S., provincial of the Salesians, in the chapel of the school. The school was formerly the old Butta mansion, and has been remodeled into a modern institution for the 14 members who are the nucleus of the school. Salesians are known for their work in teaching boys the industrial trades.

AT HOTEL CARQUINEZ

Arrivals at the Hotel Carquinez yesterday were N. S. Helles, San Francisco, and E. R. Freeman Richardson Grove.

The parishioners of St. Paul's church met at the home of Rev. Joseph Porta, the pastor, on San Pablo, and discussed the advisability of building the new church during next year.

Father Porta, in his request for opinions, gave a detailed report of the financial status of the church. The majority of those present expressed themselves in favor of an edifice costing around $50,000, but stated that it was their belief that prevailing conditions were such that most of the parishioners could not pledge the sum they would like to give. The final decision was postponed for a period of two or three years until sufficient funds were in the treasury to warrant the building without incurring a large indebtedness on which heavy interest would have to be paid.

Meanwhile every effort will be made to increase the building fund and these present pledged their support to any suggestions which Father Porta might put forth.

Much interest was betrayed in the report given by Father Porta concerning the growth of the church.
